

When the treble staff and the bass staff are joined together, they become what is called the grand staff.

The note in the middle is called Middle C. It joins the treble and bass staves together. The short, little line which cuts through the center of Middle C is called a ledger line.

In this course we will use only the notes found on the treble staff, since the notes on the treble staff are the most comfortable for higher voices to sing.

